Admittedly, schools are deemed as second home for most of the youngsters to imbibe benevolent values and to become an erudite person but that does not guarantee success. I absolutely support the notion that if people would follow their dreams and passion, they can establish themselves as distinguished personalities even if they fail their formal education.

Apparently, school is a place where a student assimilates fundamental concepts of any curriculum. However, sometimes pupils have interest in other domains such as sports. Sachin Tendulkar sets an example by becoming a superstar in the field of cricket. Determination and dedication towards sport rewarded him with success despite he dropped school at an early stage of life.

Myriads of other examples can be Bill gates & Einstein to name a few who were dropouts from their colleges
but end<sup>up</sup> achieving success in their respective fields.
Both personalities have (a) similarities that they had autonomous thinking and consequently focused more on practical skills rather than superficial facts which sometimes <sup>are</sup> inculcated in schools.

Besides, in many countries, inheriting family business is a norm. Mostly in these cases parents foster their kids to follow their path and fathom the concepts of business world. An epitome is Bansal Garments in my neighbourhood which is a 15 years old firm with turnover of more than 1 billion annually. All the family members are excellent in handicraft because they have grasped this from their ancestors elders and never gained knowledge from a school.

In conclusion, I would like to stress that success cannot be taught in schools or colleges but a person has to follow his passion with determination and if he pursues it seriously nobody can stop him to become successful.

Task 2

An increasing number of professionals, such as doctors and teachers, are leaving their own poorer countries to work in developed countries. What problems does this cause? What can be done to deal with this situation?

It is an undeniable fact that skilled workers are migrating to progressive countries for better lifestyle. However, this nuisance can be curbed if governments of under-developing world make some plausible changes.

The biggest rationale for this move is the lower pay package provided by the companies due to inflation and downside currency rate. An epitome of this can be illustrated in India where if a professional works for more than nine hours a day ~~however they are~~ <sup>he is</sup> offered a salary which is equivalent to a part-time job in Canada.

Another indrement why people are opting better places is the scourge like corruption and unemployment. If I may to present an example, most of the developin

States are under the menace of overpopulation which in turn puts burden on government and consequently mitigates the education standards and increases poverty.

However, if government takes some rational steps, this jeopardized situation can be eradicated. This can certainly be done by diminishing dependency on imports to dislodge inflation and enhancing currency rate which can give fruitful results by improving wages. Even governments of poorer countries should focus more on practical agenda rather than wasting time on superficial programmes.

In Conclusion, I would like to stress that brain drain can be prevented only if some bodies of non-declaration work could improve the basic standards of life and staying in mother land could become more benevolent.

Undoubtedly, People have <sup>raise</sup> divergent viewpoints regarding the ways they will <sup>bring</sup> ~~brought~~ up their children. Some are either fascinated by the notion of strict behaviour while others are apprehensive that they will become introvert and don't to give full freedom to their children. However, I believe that parents should have some ground rules for their offsprings so that they should not indulge in bad activities.

In many countries, bonding between family members is invaluable to inculcate benevolent values among young ones. This can only be viable if parents act as role models. Consequently their kids would imbibe conventional values and will be better prepared to face arduous tasks of life. To exemplify, in my knowledge, I had <sup>had a</sup> always fear of my parents because they were very strict and I never play truant during school time.

Good parenting also assists in mitigating crime rate from society. It is true that dual-income families have become a norm nowadays. However, an erudite parent will people have divergent viewpoints regarding youngsters to do part time job. Some are either fascinated by the idea of making their children more responsible while others are apprehensive about their stress level. However, I believe if today's exuberant youth would engage in work, they will be more productive in their future.

Proponents of part-time work among teenagers state that by doing study and work simultaneously they will imbibe the notion of work-life balance which would make them eloquent. One of the Canadian universities set an example by motivating their students to indulge in work after college so that they can earn money to enjoy their life by fulfilling all the desires they have. On top of it, due to inflation the cost of higher studies have also risen. Consequently, everybody cannot afford this level of education so doing part time work makes sense.

Opponents of part-time work while pursuing studies argue that it would increase the burden and eventually students cannot perform effectively in the classroom. An epitome of this can be the results of some of the universities in North

To stay ahead in the fierce competition, many global companies are introducing their brands in the developing world. Because of this, large shopping malls have become a fresh trend. In my opinion, this brings numerous benefits especially for job seekers and those who want to experience exotic culture.

Every modern city has one or more shopping mall which brought employment for local people. An epitome of this is Flamingo Mall in Chandigarh which recruited over thousand employees when it was opened. This huge establishment has eventually improved the financial conditions for a plethora of people. Subtle benefit of this enormous area is that everything is available under one roof say from a needle to a car. Visitors can enjoy whole day by doing shopping, eating or even can watch a movie.

Moreover, shopping mall offers remarkable variety of products for its customers. Almost all world class brands are showcasing their articles according to market demand. If I may present an example, Nokia was the company selling its mobile phones in India however now it has become one of the most emerging markets with choice of leading giants like iPhone, Motorola and so on.

Another advantage malls have provided is security and safe environment. This can be illustrated in the form of multiple level parking and secure check-in at every entrance. Undoubtedly, strict laws enforced by the government of every nation help<sup>1</sup> curb the scourge<sup>1</sup> of violence and death-penalty is one of the rules to do it away. Certainly, I support the theory that if this would be eradicated then protagonists<sup>2</sup> of terrorism will not have any fear. However, there are other viable solutions as well to dissuade<sup>3</sup> this menace.

To maintain peace and harmony in society, some harsh laws have been<sup>a</sup> part of our Constitution since ages. Accused who have committed murder of either one or more persons should not be spared by showing sympathy. Indian government sets an example by offering death penalty to Karab who killed hundreds of innocents in Mumbai. If he would not have<sup>been</sup> given this corporal punishment, then India could have witnessed such hate crimes frequently.

Opponents of death-penalty argue that crime can also be mitigated by other plausible changes like improving literacy rate<sup>4</sup> to plummet<sup>4</sup> poverty, providing employment to exuberant<sup>5</sup> youth so that they should not indulge in Undoubtedly, in the race of development people are oblivious about their surroundings and relentlessly jeopardize the nature. Although, many countries are trying to mitigate this issue. However I believe it is the moral duty of every citizen to protect the environment. So, subjects related to this field should be mandatory in schools and colleges.

Protagonists of nature advocate that if basic skills to improve the environment could introduce at elementary stage then it can have profound effect on elders as well. A school near to my hometown sets an example by launching a campaign 'Save Earth' where students are made to plant a tree every month in their neighborhood. Consequently, each society near that school has imposed *levy if anybody cuts any tree. <sub>taxes</sub>

Some people are very strict regarding the behavior of the children. Some people say that all freedom should be given to the children. Which of these ideas do you support and why?

With more liberal society these days, the notion of parents is also changing and many of them give more autonomy to their children so that they learn on their own with their experience but to me this is not a good idea at all. I advocate for the strictness to control their behavior.

The epitome of this is an increase in the nuclear families where already a surge has been noticed in the recent times about juvenile delinquency because both the parents are occupied all day long in their work and hardly find any time to devote to children who in turn divulge into bad company. So, if the parents implement some rules during their formative age then, it can definitely be a controlling factor on them.

Since, most of the nations are already having less ratio of youngsters as advances in medicine have increased life expectancy so, many countries already have plenty of strategies to save their young. For instance, parents are encouraged in Canada to send their children to day care after school hours so that they learn new things in the controlled environment rather than leaving them alone. Thus restrictions and discipline are paramount for children and parents should impose them with love and affection to make them stay away from petty wrongful thoughts.

Thus, I believe it good have parenting in the traditional ways of family rules to raise kids with high moral values.

Task 2

Admittedly, people have divergent viewpoints in support of art. Some are fascinated by the notion that civic bodies should spend money on viable resources than wasting it on superficial forms while others are apprehensive that it is crucial to preserve country's art. However, I absolutely support the idea that government should focus more on various nascent industries to stabilize the economy.

Apparently, to curb the scourge of inflation, poverty and unemployment, public authorities should instigate fresh concepts to generate jobs for burgeoning youth. An epitome of this can be seen in India where current government has erected a statue of unity worth Rs.300 crores and in the same financial year, a report reveals that country's unemployment rate is higher as compared to last 40 years. If this money would have spent wisely, then millions of citizens <sup>would</sup> get benefit.

Besides, most of the developing economies are not able to offer even basic needs to its inhabitants. Illiteracy rate and poor medical facilities are afflicting the public.

Some are fascinated by the notion that fresh ideas can be implemented if youngsters can participate in this field while others are apprehensive about the lack of experience youth has. Some people say that in all levels of education, from primary schools to universities, too much time is spent on learning facts and not enough on learning practical skills. Do you agree or disagree?

Undoubtedly, still some of the education systems worldwide are following conventional methods of teaching. However, I believe in order to make youth more eloquent, educational institutes should exaggerate<sup>①</sup> carefully and focus on practical learning rather than just theoretical.

In today's scenario, the biggest factor of unemployment is imbalance between what market requires in contrast to what universities are producing. With the rise of e-books comes the decline in paper books. Some people see this as a good step forward while others do not. What are the advantages and disadvantages of this trend?

Undoubtedly, a drastic drift can be noticed in the field of print media with the breakthrough of internet. Readers are either fascinated by the notion of e-books or apprehensive about its possible pitfalls. However, I believe this innovation has certainly brought myriad benefits.

Protagonists of e-books consider this evolution as a sign of freedom with respect to writer's point of view. An epitome of this can be a plethora of online tools which authorize anyone to upload their stories at a lower cost compared to a printed book. Consequently, a writer does not have to take permission from an editor or publishing company and can achieve name and fame under his own brand name.

Another promising outcome of e-books is its mobility and intuitive designing. Gadgets like Kindle from Amazon sets a example by catering various new features for its readers.

This device is preloaded with more than thousand e-books and use minimum amount of internet if required. On top of it, even a disabled person can imbibe and enjoy it by using a new inbuilt feature like 'Alexa' which reads the information for a user.

Opponents of e-books argue that it could harm the eye sight of a reader and it's not user friendly especially for elderly. Moreover, it is costly as it requires persistent usage of internet. Subsequently, information in printed books is more reliable and authentic which are always published under the registered printing press.

In conclusion, I would like to state that e-books have given opportunity to newscasters to spread their benevolent stories in an intimate way which eventually somehow able to curb scourge like deforestation by logging.

Task 2

Undoubtedly, most of today's youth is under the affliction of obesity and to deal with it some people are fascinated by the notion of focusing more on exercise and sports during school time. Certainly, this can be one of the viable solutions but I believe diet plays a crucial role in maintaining weight as well.

It is undeniable fact that leisure activities help students to rejuvenate and replenish their energy. Consequently, pupils will not only be able to curb their increasing weight but can also enhance their concentration level. Yadwinder Public School in Chandigarh sets an example by instigating 'Yoga Class' during morning prayers and giving stressors training on extra-curricular activities like horse riding, basketball and swimming. Eventually, this school has been ranked top in both academic and sports domain.

Experts believe that exercising alone cannot diminish the weight but a person needs to have right balanced diet as well. An epitome of this can be any scientific journal in which it has been proven that obesity is due to intake of oily, spicy and junk food which contains high level of cholesterol level so children must abstain from these genre of food products.

Another plausible change which can dissuade overweight nuisance is to stop leading sedentary lifestyle. Parents should stimulate their offsprings to become more independent and establish the habit of social activities and mitigate time in front of television and smartphones.

In conclusion, I would like to stress that although exercise is essential for healthy lifestyle however if parents excoordinate diet plan carefully along side it will bring favourable result for our exuberant youth.

The amount of time spend on sports and exercise should be increased to tackle the problem of overweight children?

Do you think this is the only way to deal with the problem?

The polarization of society with respect to interview process has been there since ages. People either are fascinated about the idea of personal information or apprehensive about it's relevancy. However, I believe that additional information about a candidate helps <sup>an</sup> employer to filter out deserving employees.

Protagonists of providing extra knowledge about job seekers state that this helps in knowing the background which is sometimes crucial for a particular profile. An epitome of this can be a night shift job where it is vital for candidates to have resilience. If a person is married and have to take care of kids in the morning then probably he would not be productive after dawn time. On top of it, if a person has mentioned about any volunteer work then it will give noteworthy impression on employer about his benign attitude.

Opponents who believe information should be restricted to work related matter only state that a company recruiter seek an erudite candidate that do <sup>if</sup> he has ~~has~~ necessary skills for his company or not irrespective of his background

If I may to present an example, varied interests of people often give idea about their learning habits and willingness to do a job.

Undoubtedly, a drastic drift has been noticed in the mode of mass media with the breakthrough of new gadgets like smartphones that can take still images as well as live videos. Obviously, any story with a picture makes it more intuitive. So, I believe this utilization of technology is beneficial than a simple text.

It is undeniable that pictures represent the authenticity of every news whether in a newspaper or in television. An epitome of this can be pictures taken by Google Earth, an online tool, of the recent natural disaster in Kerala. With the help of these images, <sup>Published on TV,</sup> government was able to send a team of army and navy for relief work and save lives of thousand stranded people. On top of it, cameras at bank ATM and in other public places assist in mitigation problems related to crime. I/ I may to present an example a recording of robbery in a bank ATM was exhibited in local news channel and consequently, the criminal was caught by the Police next day only.

Moreover, with the advent of portable cameras, news channels are even exposing public leaders who are not doing the duty responsibly. Times Now sets an example by trapping a local minister of state while taking bribe. If these genre of acts are shown to public then it would absolutely diminish the menace of corruption from the country.

Print media extensively use colorful images as well to make reading more fascinating. Pictures have been a part of magazines and journals since ages. Any story with a picture makes sense and is more effective from a reader's point of view.

In conclusion, I would like to stress that any information provided to public with a picture will act as a proof and eventually will have profound effect on viewers.

However, protagonists of commercials believe that (i) they offer a chance to a company to exhibit their fresh products. Jio Telecommunication sets an example by sponsoring the T20 World Cup last time and eventually people were forced to view the promotion in between the overs. Thus, it became so popular that it now holds more than 50% of mobile phone network market. But I opine that there are other plausible methods by which an organization can achieve growth like exchange policies and innovative offers.

Besides, with the strain of advertisements, the cost of a product also increases and consequently it is the consumer who has to bear these expenses. On top of it, government should take some initiatives in order to stop the sale of those products which are misleading the customers.

In conclusion, I would like to stress that despite notion of advertisement is fascinating for a company but a consumer only wants contentment after buying a product and this can only be achieved by quality and excellent customer services.

Usually advertisements have an impact on the minds of consumers but do not actually serve the real demands. To what extent do you agree or disagree with this?

Admittedly, adverts have a profound effect on the viewers however mostly they are deceptive and do not produce promising results for the company. Even though some of the purchasing decisions are based on want rather than need nevertheless because of certain issues related to a product would deter customers to buy it.

Apparently, Companies are spending millions of dollars in promoting their brands in this fierce competition of marketing world but still their turnover is relatively low. Instead of wasting their money on superficial facts, organization should focus more on quality and after sales services concerning the product. In epitome of this can be Maggi Noodles from Nestle Company which failed to recover once lead has been recovered from its content despite heavy promotions on a plethora of media channels.

Our personalities are predetermined as a result of our genes before we are born and there is nothing that can be done to alter our character traits. To what extent do you agree?

Admittedly, every individual has inimitable personality and according to some of the psychologists it depends upon biological factors. However, I advocate that environment of a person plays a key role in deciding characteristics as well and it can be changed.

Apparently, parents have the major responsibility in bringing up their children and thus the behaviour of parents have a profound effect on their offsprings as kids are excellent observers. If parents inculcate benevolent values to kids, they will become an extroverted person and even can become extrovert if parents stimulate them to take part in extra-curricular activities. An epitome of this can be one of my friends, Arvind, who is an introvert and pretty sorrowful by nature because his parents do not spend quality time with him.

However, protagonists of biological factors impacting personality traits state that it is due to inheritance. If parents have negative temperament then consequently children will follow their footsteps. But I opine, today youngsters are more tolerant than their parents because of the fierce competition in every domain. If an individual would not be receptive by nature or still remain an introvert then he would not be able to survive in market.

Besides, I believe that with the breakthrough of technology like Internet, people have more freedom and access to everything so most of them get influenced by what is happening around them. Navjot Singh Sidhu sets an example by becoming a politician and a television artist from a shy guy who used to play cricket.
