

Your child is studying in a school but he/she does not take any interest in studying history. Write a letter to his/her teacher and request him to encourage your child for the same.

Dear Sir

Through this epistle I would like to draw your attention toward my ward Chelsea who is your student in grade eight and does not show much interest in studying history.

xx
Her all ~~at~~ other modules are good and she has been performing very well in her academic. But since the history subject was introduced last year she found this pretty boring and did not pay any heed to study it at home. Even when I check her home assignments every subject has some project work which she does religiously except history. When I ask her about her apathy on this she tells me that the subject does not interest her as it has much theoretical content and as she is not a rote-learner so it is difficult for her to ~~at~~ cram dates and events of the past.

She otherwise is the best performer among all her peers in all the domains and even was given the school blazer ~~for~~ in her junior school to ~~for~~ her high grades. I seek your help to persuade more on this subject and advise her some practical approach. I understand that it could be a little more effort on your side but your help can make her future as always the consolidated marks are computed so this subject cannot be ignored.

I hope you would help me in this regard.

Thanks
