The environment, we are living in, is dangerous due to various problems. So who do you think is responsible? Is it government, organizations or individuals?

Admittedly, people have divergent outlook regarding who is responsible for the dangerous environment in which we are living. Some people espouse (support) that government or organizations are responsible for it, while others opine that it is the individuals who are the main reason behind this dangerous environment. This essay will shed light on the responsible bodies and will reach to a plausible conclusion.

Needless to say, the perilous (dangerous) environment is alarming as well as jeopardizing (endanger) issue which has encompassed (surround) the entire globe. What is more, the governments of different countries are contributing highly by encouraging the manufacturing of lethal weapons like nuclear bombs to make their countries most powerful across the globe. Additionally, fertilizer companies are also aggravating (make worse) the surroundings. To quote an instance, government boosts the installation of factories, biggest source of pollution, without taking environment into consideration. Eventually, dearth (lack) of stringent (strict) rules is making government responsible.

On the downside, individuals are equally worsening the environment with their irresponsible behavior like littering, smoking and excessive use of private vehicles. On top of it, the desire of people to have bigger houses leads to paucity (the presence of something in only small or insufficient quantities or amounts.) of land. To exemplify in my knowledge it can be stated that individuals use private vehicles instead of public ones and litter the environment by many ways. Ergo, these human activities result in deforestation, the most significant factor in spoiling the ambiance.

Summing it up, all three bodies play their part in environmental issues and it is imperative (crucial) to step forward and take required action instead of seeking condolence (sympathy) by blaming one another.